Compass International Consultants Inc. makes no warranty or guarantee regarding the accuracy, completeness, or reliability of the estimating data contained in these databases and assumes no financial or legal liability for any damages arising from the use of this information. All data is conceptual in nature and should be considered, at best, accurate within a range of approximately $\pm 15\%$ to $\pm 20\%$ (or more in certain cases). The cost and man-hour information is intended solely for preliminary budgeting purposes, early-stage project evaluation, and as a comparative reference against received bids, proposals, and historical estimates. It is not intended for final estimating, bidding, or contractual pricing.

The data contained within these databases has been compiled over a period exceeding 40 years from sources in both Europe and the United States. These sources include, but are not limited to, personal estimating libraries and estimator notebooks (some exceeding 25 years in age), as well as technical papers, trade publications, magazines, newspapers, and reference materials that may be more than 50 years old. The publisher has made every reasonable effort to update, validate, modify, combine, calibrate, revise, and modernize this information to reflect current construction costs, methodologies, and installation practices. These databases are intended to provide the best available current reference information relating to U.S. and global construction costs, material pricing, installation man-hours, construction productivity, EPC costs and benchmarks, and other construction-related cost and activity duration data.

These databases are sold with the express understanding that Compass International Consultants Inc. is an estimating and consulting organization, and that the data represents professional judgment regarding material costs and production rates at the time of compilation. Accuracy cannot be guaranteed, as Compass International has not reviewed project-specific scopes of work, drawings, specifications, terms and conditions, site conditions, or execution environments. Accordingly, this data must not be used as the basis for compiling lump-sum bids or fixed-price proposals. Numerous project-specific, regional, contractual, logistical, and international factors must be evaluated independently for each project. The data is intended for benchmarking, validation, and comparative analysis of bids and proposals obtained from contractors, vendors, and construction organizations only. No part of this database or data source may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means—electronic or mechanical—including photocopying, recording, scanning, uploading, or distribution—without the prior written permission of Compass International Consultants Inc.

A user (licensee) of Compass International’s annual construction cost estimating publications is defined as any individual who has access to the publication(s), including—but not limited to—accessing, viewing, printing, scanning, uploading, copying and pasting, recording, and storing the data.

The purchaser’s email address will be used to create the primary account. This individual is responsible for distributing access instructions to the designated users. Each authorized user may access the publication(s) on up to two devices. For example, a five-user license permits access on a maximum of ten devices in total. The purchaser is responsible for forwarding access credentials to the approved individuals within their organization.

Access to the data will remain active for a minimum of three (3) years. If, after this three-year period, the company or organization does not purchase subsequent annual updates from Compass International, the account will be terminated.

Compass International utilizes a secure online platform for database access (Microsoft Azure), which enables Compass International, Inc. to monitor, assist and manage usage of its databases by licensed clients. Any downtime or service interruption of the Microsoft Azure platform that is beyond the control of Compass International shall not be the responsibility or liability of Compass International.
